It is a great pleasure for me to be present here at Rehoboth today, at the 8th Graduation Ceremony of the WAD Hardap Training Centre. ...And as I am looking over this impressive audience, consisting of a large number of graduants who have successfully completed their courses in various subjects, I feel a wonderful sense of pride because you have taken the first step towards improving the quality of your lives and in the process, you have made your parents proud!

I welcome and acknowledge with appreciation, the presence of our Keynote Speaker, the Hon. Theo Diergaardt, Deputy-Minister of Lands and Resettlement; as well as the Mayor of Rehoboth, Her Worship, Cllr Eva Maasdorp - and all the other distinguished Speakers at the Head Table.

The presence of the leaders of this region, clearly attests to their profound interest in the empowerment of unemployed young people in their region, which is greatly appreciated.

Ladies and Gentlemen, The Old Mutual Group of Companies, consisting of Old Mutual Namibia, Nedbank Namibia and Mutual and Federal, are trusted names in the country. This Graduation Ceremony would not have been possible had it not been for their wonderful financial support towards all WAD's graduations across the country, for the past 7 years.

Ladies & Gentlemen: Please join me in giving these wonderful sponsors a big hand!

I trust that you have listened carefully to what Old Mutual, Mutual & Federal and Nedbank have to offer rural communities. One important example is, that it is crucial for parents, to acquire study insurance policies for their children already now, to enable them to advance to higher learning institutions, once they had completed Grade 12.

I would therefore advise you to plan timeously and wisely, and not to wait until it is too late.

***Most importantly – L & G: You can contribute towards reducing poverty today, if you take out an insurance policy, or if you open a savings account with one of these companies, because all business which will be concluded with the Old Mutual, Nedbank, or Mutual & Federal today, will enable WAD to earn financial points for such transactions, which in turn, will eventually be converted into cash. These funds will immediately be ploughed back into community development.

Ladies & Gentlemen: I am particularly proud of what the Rehoboth Training Centre has achieved since it opened its doors during 2001. It is WAD's pride that this Human Development Centre has, since its establishment, succeeded in giving hope and opening windows of opportunity to thousands of young people who have found jobs in the labour market or who have established their own income-generating ventures.

I am further pleased that this centre has served as a "catchment" area for school-leavers and school drop-outs since its establishment, and very proud that the centre has, according to the Regional Coordinator at the Centre, trained to date, 6 490 unemployed young people in various subjects to become self-sustained.

Also according to the Head of the Centre, an estimated 70% of the students trained, have already found jobs in the labour market or started their own income-generating ventures. We are immensely proud of these achievements!

In this regard, I wish to express my sincere congratulations and gratitude towards the dedicated trainers at the Rehoboth Training Centre, which is managed by highly committed staff members. I now request them to come to the front as I mention their names.

- Firstly, Ms Annaliza Goagoses, who is the Head of the Centre.
- Mr Whilfred Alcock - the exemplary Computer Trainer at the Centre.
- Mr Jan Kastoor - the Trainer in Office Administration;
- Mrs Elfriede Engelbrecht, the Needlework Trainer.
- Mr Adolf Goagoseb, the Weaving trainer;
- Mr Colin Dick, who is the Upholstery Trainer, and who trains people on how to make old furniture look brand-new again;
- Mr Hennie Rhodes and Ms Zelda Cloete, the Trainers in Bread and Cake-baking;
- Ms Nadia Strauss, the Catering Trainer; and
- Ms Eva Coetzee, the Trainer for the Pre-primary School.

L & G: Please give these wonderful Trainers a BIG HAND!!

I am very pleased to announce that, after having written their examinations, a total of 169 students will receive their certificates this morning, in Computer Literacy; Office Administration and Typing; Tailoring; Upholstery; Bread-Baking; as well as training in “Aspects of the Namibian Constitution”; and the “Contents of Gender-related laws”.

Having said that, Ladies & Gentlemen: I wish to congratulate the students for having successfully completed their respective courses. I particularly wish to congratulate the best-performing computer student, Ms Naomi Haubas, for having reached an outstanding pass mark of 100% in her computer examinations - and I request her to stand!

Congratulations Naomi – We are very proud of you! I wish to announce that it is the very first time since WAD’s establishment that a student has attained a pass mark of 100% in computers. Please come forward to receive a token of appreciation from your Computer Trainer. (Hands)

And now.... L & G - I wish to focus on very alarming issues such as Passion Killing, which have for a long time, been plaguing the Namibian society!

Hardly a day goes by without a woman having been abused or murdered by their partners! The latest victim is the daughter of our Weaving Trainer, Mr Adolf Goagoseb and the sister of our Director of Ceremonies, the late Petrina Goagoses, who landed in hospital with 95% burns all over her body when her boyfriend locked her in her bedroom at Dordabis, after she ended their relationship. He then set her bedroom on fire; and the result was that she died last Sunday morning in the ICU of the Katutura State hospital.

We are now informed that the suspect has been apprehended and charged with murder! WAD extends its sincere condolences to Mr & Mrs Goagoseb, Annaliza and to the entire Goagoseb family.

**I now request the audience to rise to observe a moment of silence in remembrance of this sad event..... THANK YOU!

L & G: Although Women's Action for Development and other stakeholders have in the past, expressed ourselves strongly about this ugly disease in our communities, the evil of Passion Killing of women, is still haunting us and is still continuing at such an alarming rate, that an outsider would believe that women have become fair game in Namibia!

Because of this shocking disgrace and the poor image which Namibia is gaining internationally in the process, H/E, President Pohamba, has repeatedly called upon the Police, NGO's, Churches, etc to do everything possible to assist in stopping this madness of men being unable to accept rejection by women and to see killing them as the only solution to sooth their hurt egos.

However, There is a clear line between boys who might have experienced serious rejection before, or not having learned right from the parental home and through their school career, to accept defeat like a real man.

It is most disturbing, that instead of developing refined skills of maintaining a relationship with girls, based on love and respect, boys are rather developing an ownership perception of girls, which is fueled by the presentation of gifts to "buy" their love.

Girls on the other hand, who might have grown up marginalized, unfortunately often contribute towards such a relationship which is based purely on the desire for more and more material things, even beyond the point where they have fallen out of love with their boyfriends.

...And to prove this - I wish to refer to a recent suicide note, in which a young man testified that he was continuously investing in a young woman, by regularly giving her material support and gifts to win her love. This was clearly pointed out, as the trigger for Passion Killing, when he summarily killed both of them after she continuously accepted many material things and money from him, totaling as high as N$50 000,00, but thereafter she rejected him..... She sadly paid dearly with her life!

The question is, dear Parents: Where did we go wrong in the upbringing of our children? it is so sad that the Parental Home unfortunately often presents to children the first exposure of disrespect and violence against women, when fathers beat up mothers in front of their children. Boys in particular, can develop grossly distorted perceptions of male/female relationships from such incidents. Thus, when Parental Homes fail in this way, it fails the entire community and the entire generation!

...And what is more - many young men sadly do not know how to deal with their emotions, because they were ever so often told by their parents that boys must act like real men who do not cry, because crying is a sign of weakness! However, this, is the biggest mistake parents can make, because how then, will boys ever learn to deal with their emotions if they are not aloud to cry?

Thus, when explosive emotions pile up, many men are totally unprepared on how to deal with their emotions, and it eventually sadly erupts in Passion Killing within relationships with girls.

...And since children are not born with knowledge of the dress code of social behavior, failure of the Parental Homes and Schools to train and strengthen the norms and values; the rights and wrongs before children enter into adult life, they enter life totally unequipped with crucial life skills and become the eventual Passion Killers, Thieves, Alcoholics, the Drug Addicts of our society.

The influence of alcohol and drugs on social behavior, is a well-documented factor in male/female relationships, and a proven reason for GBV which can spill over into Passion Killing.

In this regard, WAD highly commends the recent revitalized action by the Police against illegal shebeens, which should be complemented and enforced by the co-operation and support of the entire citizenry.

Ladies & Gentlemen: There is no doubt that Namibia has now come to the cross-roads of this serious problem. The question is now, after having named some causes of the evil of GBV and Passion Killing, where and how do we start to correct this massive problem in society?

In WAD's view - For the new generation of young people to set up well-informed and formative Parental Homes, they should already, at school level, intensively be exposed and prepared for the art of gender relations and parenthood.

The answer is undoubtedly to focus on that GOLDEN SUBJECT, "Life Skills" at school: It is for this reason that WAD appeals to the Ministry of Education to ensure that the subject, "Life Skills", which was grossly neglected in schools in the past, should now, as a matter of great urgency, become an examinable subject, which should be passed by all learners, to enable them to advance to the next school grade, instead of learners playing rugby, and teachers marking their examination papers during "Life Skills" periods.

WAD believes that the implementation of that GOLDEN SUBJECT, "Life Skills", as an important examinable subject, is fully justified. It is the most important subject to prepare learners on how to deal with life - to train learners on how to respect themselves; how to respect human life; how to respect women; how to respect our norms and values; how to refrain from misusing alcohol and drugs; how to deal with family life; yes, how to deal with their careers.....

WAD views the gross neglect of children in their parental homes, together with the gross neglect of the subject, "Life Skills" within schools for many years, as a primary reason for the social horrors which the Namibian society is experiencing right now with increased frequency.

It is for this reason that WAD has, since 2011 penetrated all Secondary Schools country-wide to equip "Life Skills" Teachers and School Counsellors with knowledge regarding the causes and consequences of GBV, based on the findings of a research which WAD conducted together with the University of Namibia some years ago. In this manner 67 500 learners will be reached for orientation on GBV and its causal factors.

Women and Child Protection Units are crucial to serve women who are in a serious crisis! However, WAD has received numerous complaints by women, that our “Women and Child Protection Units” are not functioning as they should, and that the telephones of those units very often go unanswered. It should be remembered that when women make calls to those centres, they are desperate, and in a very serious crisis. Thus, if those telephones are not answered, these Units become dysfunctional, leaving desperate women in complete despair and without assistance when they needed it the most.

I therefore respectfully appeal to the Inspector-General of the Police to lodge an urgent investigation into the efficient functioning of the “Women and Child Protection Units” across the country, to ensure that women receive the necessary assistance when they need it the most.

Country-wide “Stand Up against Crime Campaigns” are equally crucial! WAD has taken note with great appreciation, of the “Stand Up Against Crime” campaigns which are being established by the Police in a proactive bid to curb crime and Passion Killing. WAD pledges its unconditional support to this commendable initiative by the Police, to assist in curbing crime. Every single citizen is therefore, called upon today, to join the Police in such campaigns to ensure a crime-free society.

Moreover, Churches should do much more...! Churches should be a refuge for the community and should assume a much more meaningful role of outreach and become more experienced as a formative force in communities. Gone are the days when Spiritual Leaders merely preached about spirituality from their pulpits on church days. It is crucial that spiritual leaders should, more than ever before, become involved as important facilitators for church groups, where men and women can talk freely about their trials and tribulations in difficult relationships.

I therefore, respectfully appeal to the Council of Churches to ensure that when Training Manuals are compiled for Spiritual Leaders, it should incorporate training for Pastors on how to address social problems such as Alcoholism and Drug abuse, GBV, Passion Killing, Baby Dumping, etc.

The Print and Electronic Media are equally indispensable in any society and has a very important informative role to play in this game.

The Media is therefore, called upon today, to do much more to engage in “Investigative Journalism”, instead of merely engaging in “Sensational Reporting”. The Media is a powerful force to influence public opinion and should therefore, investigate causal factors behind these social evils, and continuously expose them to its readers and viewers.

Having said that, Ladies and Gentlemen - I sincerely trust that the young people, parents, the Police and the Media present in this audience, will take my words seriously.

I urgently appeal to men to stop killing women when they are rejected!!
I urgently appeal to men to forget about their bloated ego's and to accept rejection like a real man. Walk away and leave her life alone - or spend the rest of your life in prison!

I urgently appeal to women to stop the habit of just grabbing gifts from men, when you are not serious with the relationship, because if you do, you are playing a dangerous game, which can lead to your death.

You, as young graduants, have taken the first step towards paving the way to a bright future for yourselves - and I am immensely proud of what you have achieved today. I congratulate you and I wish you great success for the future.

But we can only be successful if we are operating in a crime-free environment - free from Gender Based Violence and Passion Killing.

The challenge will therefore be, for all of us to join hands to transform Namibia into a safe and peaceful country - And we can do this, for the benefit of our entire nation, but also for potential tourists and investors, because this in turn, will contribute profoundly, towards the economic stability and well-being of our country. THANK YOU!
